LOCATION

MENDOZA, ARGENTINA

Located in the Cuyo region of Argentina, Mendoza is a high-altitude desert. It is the heart of the Argentinian wine region, famous worldwide for its Malbecs and other red wines.

The Andes Mountains shape its climate because its immensity slows the entry of possible wet fronts from the Pacific. Mendoza is characterized by its low cloudiness and high insolation, with almost always blue skies and scarce concentrated rains.

MENDOZA

World Capital of Wine

Mendoza is the main wine-producing province of Argentina and since July 2005 one of the Great World Capitals of Wine. In this land, the birthplace of Malbec, more than 1,200 wineries produce 70% of all Argentinian wines.

Among the most important characteristics, it has a great diversity of soils, climate and altitude, showing everything from young and fruity wines to products with great aging potential, fruit concentration and aromas.

LAS COMPUERTAS, VINEYARD 1930

CLIMATE

Located 1,050 meters above sea level, it is one of the coldest areas of Luján de Cuyo, presenting thermal amplitudes and temperatures during the vegetative cycle ideal for producing grapes of the highest quality.

SOIL

The elaboration of our wines is based on caring for the expression of our grapes and terroir, achieving wines with personality and freshness, being our interpretations of classic Las Compuertas wines.
